

Nowadays , I believe that more or less all of us think that our societies are not fair enough towards its people and that lots of changes should be done in order to accomplish an utopist society where everyone would be treated as they should be. Some thoughts that burst into my mind when we talk about an ideal society are:

- A society where all are treated equally without the distinguish among poor and rich and don't have a 'two gear' world.
- A society where there is justice and it is the same for all the people.
- A society where there is peace, without crime and violence , where everyone enjoy their lives and do not have to worry about getting robbed when he goes out.
- A society where there is liberty of speech, which means everyone can say his opinion and express his thoughts (the meaning of democracy) .
- A society which will care about environment and will stop destroying our beautiful nature in the name of money.
- Our energy supplies would be of many kinds....solar, wind, water, gas, geothermal or whatever is most effective in that part of the country. There would be no restrictions on what kinds of vehicles people could drive, but there would be higher gas and oil prices to encourage smaller and cleaner vehicles.
- The mode of the society-country that is to take care of her own first, and if there is extra, to share with others, but not to be constantly shipping over half our food to other countries on a regular basis. Our agriculture would be more natural, more based on crop rotation, less on chemicals and more on caring for the soil.
- The things we don't want in our society wouldn't necessarily be illegal, but highly taxed, like cigarettes, alcohol, drugs and prostitution. Loads of regulation and excessive taxes would make the "war on drugs" disappear.
- Anyone willing and who is able to work would have a good life. Those physically or mentally challenged would receive assistance in finding a source of work that fits into their abilities, and they would be taken care of and don 't left alone in the side .A flat tax on everyone, similar to a sales tax, would eliminate the unfairness of the taxing systems, and give everyone equal opportunities.

Those are pretty much some thoughts that I believe would make one society to be considered as utopian but to be honest I do not believe that none of the previous are going to happen because in most societies everyone is thinking about his one good and himself.■
