

PROJECT UTOPIA

Utopia is an ideal world where all people come together, where the violence and the criminal incidents are absent. Earth is certainly not that kind of place, since people tend to stay away from each other without any will for social communication. Everyone loves nature, but everyone harms it easily without thinking the consequences.

All of the above issues occur, because people in organizations care only about how much money they will gain besides anything else. Hence, there is not either an ethical or a moral dilemma when it is about money. There is no excuse for that, but people will not change until the world's cataclysm.

Every day, we experience situations where we must follow certain rules. When there is a rule, there are always people that will break that rule, not because they are against this rule, but because they are used to the fact that there is no one that will tell them what to do or not.

However, people are treated with no respect or meritocracy. They are treated like a portion of meat that is mindless and ready to follow whichever famous companies trend for no reason rather than their social image. The reasons for these situations are the low educational level people have and the rules that are not applied properly.

Hence, the level of education could be improved by playing serious games that they offer not only entertainment, but education and a lot of fun which is the main goal of life.
