Course: Serious Games
Project: Utopia

The foundation of the ideal society rests on the human mind. For every individual, the perception about the ideal community varies depending on what every individual considers as ideal and proper for its existence.

In my opinion ideal society or community should react more ecological. It would be better for the environment we live, to abandon the Western way of living, the enormous structures, big cities, industrial zones and the pollution that they cause and focused in traditional or new techniques that will bring harmony and balance to the environment surrounding us.

Also advanced science and technology will improve human's life not only in practical matters but also believed that dramatic changes in living standards such as life extension, the absence of death and illnesses will redefine the human nature.

Education is an essential and vital part of society. Individuals should expand their knowledge in such a way that will improve the human life and behavior among the society and also gain the necessary information and tools for maintain this ideal community. Moreover, in an ideal society every individual will have the opportunity to take part or work, in something that they have dedicated themselves in, causing joy and euphoria and also improve productivity and awareness of the society.

Moreover, disciplinary offences are mostly caused due to economic criteria and poverty. The total wealth is assembled in few people and the others try to survive with few resources. In Utopia the total wealth should be equally divided and no one or thing is any better than another.

Furthermore, the health sector is another significant element for Utopians. Advanced techniques and already existing treatments in medicine should be provided to the patients for free, improving the quality of life and extending the limit of age. In combination with the uprising trend of technology at the last decades, the health providence should be more effective, efficient and available to all people without the need of taxes or health insurance companies.

Taking into consideration all the abovementioned factors for the ideal society I could note that we, as a society and culture, are really far away from what we called Utopia although perfect society seems close.

Name: George Kyriacou
Student Number: S 2518158