

Utopia

I dream a world without starvation where food is spread as rumors, where violence does not exist in the mind of any person, neither contamination, only in museums as evidence of a past where civilization did not exist. I would like to see that past in the same way we see dinosaur's fossils nowadays.

I would like a world without borders, where eyes are open with the only intention of appreciate and be aware of our surroundings, clean eyes that look at others without judging for being tall, small, fat, skinny, men, woman... A place were finally science and spirituality reach the same consensus, admitting that inside each one there exist an eternal source of capability and benevolence that everyone can reach only when one is able to look inside, a world where energy and matter interchange its states while we are part of the process.

In this utopic world humans and nature are only one, finally we know what respect means and we recognize the terrible damage that causing nature we cause ourselves, we as a single race with nature restore the damage caused. In this world we give others what we do not need, and we take only the necessary, but without any regimen.

Technology and games are off course part of this world. Technology for human service. Games fundamental part to recover the forgiven primitive way of learning where everyone enjoys and learns in the mean time, even without noticing it.

Rules are basic; give others what you want for you, if you are not giving the appropriate, you will be suspicious of lack of love and will receive an annoying intense therapy of hugs and noisy kisses on your ears without right to refuse.

Andrea Patiño Orrego

Id. 2001683

Serious Games-2012

