Utopia

The concept of utopia can be explained in two different ways. The first way is ou-topos, a not existing place. The second is eu-topos, a perfect society. In my opinion these ways are sort of the same, because a perfect society can not be found in reality. So if you want to make a perfect society, it is necessary to look for other ways than changing the existing world. On the other hand, a perfect society is different for everyone. So if the existence of imperfections is perfect for someone, it is possible to find this perfect world/utopia or create this in real life.

After explaining my view on the concept of utopia, I'm now going to describe my utopia.

The environment should be changeable to everyone's preferences, but in such a way that nobody is interfering someone else's environment. For example the contours are the same for everybody but the color/smell and ambient noise can be different and changeable. All the living one's that are living in my utopia should understand each other, not only in language but also in feelings/thoughts and physical stimuli (Inspiration movie: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RB_l7SY_ngI). The understanding will always be there due to technologies like cybernetics.

Besides understanding, they also have to respect each other. If anyone is not following the rule of respecting each other, there will be no punishment but sort of a 'stop' for this person. This stop lasts until the rule of respect is followed. Because of the understanding and respect there will be no ambiguities and misunderstanding. People will live in total harmony and peace, also loving each other will be much easier.
